Introduction. Consumer behaviour is complex and rarely follows traditional economic theories of decision-making. When choosing what products to buy or what services to use, people often think they are making smart decisions and behaving in ways that are highly rational and congruent with their values and intentions. However, daily life illustrates that this is often not the case. Why We Don't "Walk the Talk": Understanding the ... 152 Human Ecology Review, Vol. 16, No. 2, 2009 ability must focus at both the institutional level—lobbying for changes to the political and economic systems in order to encourage 'green' behaviour (Sandilands 1993), and the individual level (Blake 1999).
